A note about content: The staging and discussion of these plays will engage with depictions of sexual assault, mental illness, ableism, and self-harm. Please be advised that gunfire will be used in both shows.

Brave Spirits Theatre acknowledges that we perform on the traditional land of the Pamunkey Indian Tribe. Historically, they inhabited the coastal tidewater of Virginia on the north side of the James River near Chesapeake Bay. Scholars estimate that various distinct cultures of Native Americans occupied this part of the mid-Atlantic coast for more than 10,000 years before European contact.

DRAMATURG’S NOTE

The Duchess of Malfi and The Changeling are two macabre tales with unforgettable female protagonists who struggle to keep secret affections, secret acts, and secret identities hidden from the powerful men governing their lives. Both plays examine sex, violence, abuse, madness, and family – but they do so through very different lenses. John Webster’s The Duchess of Malfi (first performed around 1613) was based on a purportedly true account and it was praised in its first printing as a masterpiece of tragedy. On the other hand, The Changeling by Thomas Middleton and William Rowley (first performed around 1622) was based in part on a moralistic fiction and early performances were popular due to its comedic subplot. While Webster’s work examines various power structures and delves into unsettling individual moralities, Middleton and Rowley’s play uses a mix of the gruesome and the absurd to explore our anxieties over appearance, disguise, and deception. Both plays, however, focus on self-determined women who defy their families to pursue their own manner of independence. The confident Duchess refuses to compromise her free will and self-respect. The desperate Beatrice-Joanna removes obstacles in the way of her happiness by any means available. Though we follow these characters to different geographies, in different stations, and through different tactics, they are each haunting examples of women who battle against the constraints of their worlds at the risk of their own lives.
SYNOPSIS, THE CHANGELING

On the coast of Spain, a traveling gentleman named Alsemero is on his way to Malta. During a stop in Alicant, he meets Beatrice-Joanna at her local church and the two of them fall in love. Upon meeting her father, Vermandero, Alsemero discovers that Beatrice-Joanna is engaged to the noble Alonzo de Piracquo. Meanwhile, Alibius, the steward of the local asylum, shuts his young wife, Isabella, away from the world in order to keep her from other men. While imprisoned at her husband's asylum, however, she must fend off the advances of his assistant, Lollio, as well as a fool named Antonio and a madman named Franciscus. At Vermandero’s, Beatrice grows desperate to avoid her upcoming marriage to Alonzo without offending her father. She plots to have her father’s servant, DeFlores, kill her fiancé. DeFlores has desired Beatrice from afar and agrees to help her. But when DeFlores demands repayment for his deeds and Alonzo's brother begins to suspect that someone in the castle is guilty of murder, Beatrice finds herself trapped by terrible secrets ...

DIRECTOR’S NOTE, THE CHANGELING

Recently the Renwick Gallery here in Washington, D.C., hosted a Burning Man art exhibit. Included was a smaller version of Marco Cochrane's sculpture Truth is Beauty, made of steel rod, tubing, and covered by a stainless steel mesh. The piece depicts a woman with her head thrown back, on her tip-toes, and stretching toward the sky. It is meant to convey a woman expressing her humanity. Displayed at Burning Man in 2013, the original sculpture was fifty-five feet tall and had a base which included an inscription in multiple languages: “What Would The World Be Like If Women Were Safe?”

That world is so far from reality, I cannot even imagine it. When we started The Changeling, I thought I would keep a running tally of how many news stories about men assaulting women I would see over the course of the rehearsal process. I found I couldn’t bear to keep count.

The perennial dramaturgical question, “why this play now?” is not typically how I find my way into a production as a director. But this time around, it is all I could think about. This play is four hundred years old, yet every moment of it I recognize from my life, and from the lives of my friends. What did it mean to be staging it now as we once again asked women to publicly relive their trauma? What did it mean to ask audiences to watch a play about men’s physical and emotional subjugation of women while our own nation was once again showing women how little our pain counts, particularly when it threatens to get in the way of the ambitions of a white man?

There are no easy answers. But what theatre asks us to do is to witness: the lives, the hopes, the actions, and the sorrows of other people. The successful confirmation of Brett Kavanaugh to the Supreme Court marked a supreme failure of Americans to witness the pain of women. And we have been here before.

In this theatre, as part of this audience, you are agreeing to witness—together. And maybe, once we are able to witness, and we are witnessed, we might finally be able to imagine what that Truth is Beauty world would be like.

SYNOPSIS, THE DUCHESS OF MALFI

In Italy, the widowed Duchess of Malfi has been forbidden to remarry by her brothers, Duke Ferdinand and the Cardinal. When she defies them and marries her steward, Antonio, she must keep the union a secret. The powerful brothers, however, are suspicious of their sister and hire the murderous Bosola (who has served the Cardinal in the past) to spy on her. Bosola discovers that the Duchess’ has been hiding a pregnancy and tries to learn the name of the father. Once Ferdinand receives Bosola’s report, he becomes enraged and threatens his sister. The Duchess and Antonio plot Antonio’s escape from Ferdinand’s grasp. They concoct a story that Antonio has cheated the Duchess’ out of her fortune and Antonio runs away to Ancona with one of their infant twins. Just as the Duchess leaves Malfi to covertly reunite with her husband, the Cardinal discovers their plan and sends word to have them banished and arrested ...

DIRECTOR’S NOTE, THE DUCHESS OF MALFI

Early modern tragedies make strange bedfellows. Artaud built his imagined first season of the Theatre of Cruelty around them, T.S. Eliot quipped in praise that Webster “saw the skull beneath the skin,” and rare is the article or review of Sarah Kane without an adjectival ‘Jacobean.’ Modern productions are often described as “Tarantino-esque,” which is a bit backwards really. It is truer to observe that the early modern dramatists we often feature here at Brave Spirits were writing in an incarnadine tradition that stretched continuously back through medieval theatre and into the darker Dionysian urges of antiquity, and this thread still entwines us today.
The Duchess of Malfi is a revenge tragedy that almost forgets that it is one. Between a winking self-awareness – the characters constantly refer to being in a play and compare themselves to actors – the actual action that must be revenged doesn’t occur until almost the play’s end. Unlike Hamlet or The Revenger’s Tragedy, which lay out their wrongs quickly and move on to their mouse-traps, Duchess doesn’t even reveal who is avenging what until it is far too late for the characters to escape.

Of course, the characters could have escaped, but where would they run? One of the themes I see in the play is not that power corrupts, but that power is dangerously attractive to the already corrupt. Positions of authority allow the (male) characters of the play to act almost entirely without consequence, and to impose their ghoulish amorality on everyone around them. There are no incorruptible institutions: the state, the church, family, and marriage are all seen through their failings, and those institutions often serve as shelter for the abusers at the expense of the victim.

One of the reasons I am drawn to these plays is the reminder that power is not just an idea, or rhetoric, or an ideology. Power is enacted upon real bodies, and there are real consequences. As Terry Eagleton observed, “It is of no particular consolation to the victims of torture to be told that their anguish is culturally constructed.” Our dark guide through this play, Bosola, begins preoccupied by trivia and a self-serving justice, blind to the consequences of actions until she literally must bear the bodies herself. Early modern tragedy, for all its lurid violence, corrupt eroticism, and grotesque setting is deeply rooted in the idea that politics and ideas are lived in the flesh.

ARTIST BIOGRAPHIES

Jessica Aimone (Graphic Designer) (she, her, hers) is an actor, director, graphic designer and mother to the best little man ever. She has performed across the country and with the American Shakespeare Center (Macbeth, The Merry Wives of Windsor, Love’s Labours Lost); Theater at Monmouth (Antony and Cleopatra, The Liar, As You Like It); 1st Stage (The Violet Hour, Holiday), BST (Romeo and Juliet, The Bloody Banquet) and other theatres in the DC metro area. She directed shows for the DC Capital Fringe (Macbeth) and BST (A Midsummer Night’s Dream) and works as a graphic designer at Signature Theatre. She is proud to be a part of BST and its incredible mission. Next up she’ll be directing As You Like It.

Madeline Belknap (Costume Designer) (she, her, hers) is a DC-based costume designer, actor, and musician. Her previous design credits include 1984 with SCENA Theatre, This Is All Just Temporary and Bhavi the Avenger with Convergence Theatre, Stupid Fing Bird with Silver Spring Stage, and The Laramie Project with CUA’s CenterStage. She currently stitches for the Washington National Opera, and her costume construction has been seen in their productions of La Traviata, Candide, The Barber Of Seville, Don Carlo, and Alcina. She is also a freelance stitcher and dressmaker.

Alex Brady (Lighting Designer) (he, him, his) has been designing lighting locally in Annapolis and Baltimore since 2002. He has been nominated for the WATCH Award for Outstanding Lighting Design multiple times, most recently for 33 Variations and Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf? at Colonial Players. Brady serves as the resident lighting designer for the AACC Dance Company and works with various local theatres and high schools. He is an alumnus of the Graduate Institute at St. John's College and also teaches for the Arts Departments at Anne Arundel Community College.

Charlie Cook (Changeling: Vermandero; Duchess: Castruchio) (he, him, his) is a robot-dinosaur space-cowboy who is excited for his premiere shows with BST. He is a local DC actor who has worked primarily with 4615 Theatre Company (Macbeth, Waxing West, King John, The Lion in Winter, A.W.E.S., Loves’ Labour’s Lost, Women Beware Women). He would like to thanks his friends and family who support him, The Happy Tart, and Emma Cech. He would like to give a PSA discouraging the population from pursuing immortality as it ultimately leads to ruin as life passes you by in an existential horror, the likes of which most can scarcely dream. You gotta carry that weight. Crabs steal boots.

Katie Culligan (Duchess: Duchess of Malfi) (she, her, hers) is thrilled to be returning to BST after playing Wagner in Doctor Faustus last fall! DC Area: Quotidian Theatre – Hedda Gabler (Hedda); Round House Theatre – Caroline or Change (Rose u/s, performed); Ford’s Theatre – A Christmas Carol (Sister); Arena Stage – Legacy of Light; Cumberland Theatre – Noises Off (Brooke), The Rocky Horror Show (Magenta); Creative Cauldron – Nevermore (Virginia); Unexpected Stage Company – Zombie Prom (Coco); Off-Broadway/NY: Golden Fleece Ltd.’s Madame (Helena Rubinstein); Nosedive Prod/Molotov Theatre – Fat Men in Skirts (Pam/Popo). National Tour: Adventure Theatre – Five Little Monkeys (Monkey #2). Education: JMU, BA in Theatre. She sends her love to Toby and Derek.

Genna Beth Davidson (Changeling: Puppetry Designer) (she, her, hers) is a DC-based puppeteer, puppet builder and actress. She graduated from the University of Maryland, College Park, in 2008 with a BA in Theatre. Her home base for all things puppet is DC company, Wit’s End Puppets, a company she helped found. This year she’ll be producing the second Puppet SlamNation in Takoma Park (coming up on November 2, 2018). She encourages you to check out the bi-monthly Puppet Lobby that Wit’s End Puppets hosts in DC. This is her first time designing for BST and thanks Charlene for giving her this opportunity.

Ryan Fields (Changeling: Franciscus / Jasperino; Duchess: Malatesti) (he, him, his) is an actor who recently graduated from Muhlenberg College, where he received a BA in English and Theatre. Here, he performed in projects such as Glory (Gloucester), an adaptation of Shakespeare’s Henry VI tetralogy; as well as Tarell Alvin McCraney’s Wig Out! (Eric). At Allentown Public Theatre, he performed as John in Athol Fugard’s The Island. Ryan has been a resident of the DMV his entire life and is excited to be joining BST’s fall shows.
Jared H. Graham (Fight Captain; Changeling: Antonio; Duchess: Antonio) (he, him, his) is glad to be spending his first season with BST. DC AREA: 4615 Theatre (Company Member)—Macbeth (Macbeth), Dinner; Olney Theatre Center/National Players Tour 69—Othello (Iago), The Great Gatsby, Alice in Wonderland. MEMPHIS—New Moon Theatre Company: Hamlet (Hamlet), Titus Andronicus (Saturninus); Playhouse on the Square/ Circuit Playhouse—King Charles III (Harry), Peter and the Starcatcher, American Idiot, Billy Elliot, Seminar, Assassins (Proprietor/ Lee Harvey Oswald). TRAINING: MFA in Physical Theatre from the Accademia dell’ Arte in Arezzo, Italy; BFA in Theatre Performance from University of Memphis.

Jordan Friend (Sound Designer) (he, him, his) is a DC-based director, actor, and composer. He is the Founding Artistic Director of 4615 Theatre Company, where he has directed productions including King John, The Lion in Winter, and Macbeth. As an actor, he has most recently appeared as Isaac in Disgraced (NextStop Theatre Company). Jordan holds a BFA in Acting from Ithaca College, and has studied directing under Joy Zinoman at the Studio Theatre, as well as classical acting at the London Academy of Music and Dramatic Art. Learn more at www.4615theatre.com.

Musa Gurnis (Changeling: DeFlores; Duchess: Cariola) (she, her, hers) is a scholar whose teaching and research focuses on early modern theatre. This is her first time performing the plays that she loves. She is delighted to have this opportunity to join the warm and talented acting community in DC.

Laura Hawk (Duchess: Stage Manager) (she, her, hers) is a freelance Stage Manager working in the DC/Baltimore area. She recently graduated from McDaniel college and this is her first production with BST. Previous credits include: Montgomery Summer Dinner Theater: Sister Act (Stage Manager); McDaniel credits: The Bakkhai (Stage Manager), Carrie: The Musical (Stage Manager), Hair (Stage Manager), Snow White: A British Panto (ASM), Wendell (ASM).

Casey Kaleba (Director, The Duchess of Malfi; Fight Director) (he, him, his) is BST’s resident fight director. A Certified Fight Director with the Society of American Fight Directors, Casey has arranged fights for more than four hundred productions, including extensive work with the Folger, Round House, Signature, and Rorschach Theatres. He has stabbed hearts, dismembered bodies, served up brain a la cranium, built blood fountains, poked eyes both in and out, and done away with too many babies in too many ways. Professional directing credits include the National Players, Rorschach Theatre, as well as numerous academic productions. www.toothandclawcombat.com

Adrianne Knapp (Changeling: Isabella; Duchess: Julia) (she, her, hers) is excited to be in her first productions with BST! Adrienne is a Pittsburgh native and a graduate of Point Park University with a BFA in Acting. Recent roles include Guardia/Puppeteer in Don Cristóbal (Pointless Theatre), Sarah in Stop and Smell the Rosé (LiveArt DC 2018), Juliet in Romeo and Juliet (Pittsburgh Irish and Classical Theatre), and Gladys in 1984 (Prime Stage Theater: Pittsburgh). She also worked as a stand-in for season one of David Fincher’s Netflix series Mindhunter. She is overjoyed to be working with puppets, guns, and whips (oh my!) In bocca al lupo, crepi il lupo. Instagram: @adrianneknapp Claire Kimball (Dramaturg; Production Photographer) (she, her, hers) is a theatre practitioner, educator, and scholar of early modern drama. She has previously taught high school theatre arts and served as an education editor for The Shakespeare Standard. Dramaturgy: The Tempest, Love’s Labour’s Lost (American Shakespeare Center); The Bloody Banquet, A King and No King, ’Tis Pity She’s a Whore, Doctor Faustus (BST). BA with Departmental Honors from Washington College, MLitt in Shakespeare and Performance from Mary Baldwin University.

Steve Lebens (Changeling: Alonzo / Alibius; Duchess: Cardinal) (he, him, his) started his career at the Guthrie Theater in his home state of Minnesota. In DC he has worked at many theatres, including Folger Theatre, Signature Theatre, Studio Theatre, WSC, American Ensemble Theater, No Rules Theatre, Source Theatre and American Century Theater, where he was a company member. Most recently Steve played Duncan in Macbeth with 4615 Theatre, Jimbo in Adult Entertainment with the Klunch, and Orgon in Tartuffe with Perisphere Theater. Steve also works in film and television and has played supporting and co-star roles in Field of Lost Shoes, King Lear, House of Cards, VEEP and Law and Order: Criminal Intent.

Briana Manente (Makeup Designer) (she, her, hers) is primarily an actor in the DC area who loves playing with the power of makeup and continues to do expand her makeup portfolio and kit. For BST she has played Hotspur (Henri IV), Vasquez (’Tis Pity She’s a Whore), and Mardonius (A King and No King). Previously she designed makeup for Coriolanus, The Trojan Women Project, ’Tis Pity, and A King and No King. She is a proud Artistic Associate of BST and Associate Artistic Director of M-NCPPC’s Shakespeare in The Parks: Prince George’s County.

Daniel Mori (Set Consultant) (he, him, his) is a multi-disciplinary designer, director and teaching artist, with concentrations in puppetry and early childhood arts education. DC area credits have included Smithsonian Discovery Theater (Production Manager, Casting Director, Designer-in-Residence) and Flying V Theatre (Production Manager, Intern Coordinator, Director). Daniel currently serves as Theatre Production Supervisor for the City of Rockville, and is a proud company member of Young Playwright’s Theatre and Flying V Theatre.

Ben Peter (Changeling: Alsemero; Duchess: Pescara) (he, him, his) is thrilled to be making his BST debut this season. DC AREA: UrbanArias: WHY IS EARTHA KITT TRYING TO KILL ME? A Love Story; Monumental Theatre Co.: Pippin; Workhouse Arts Center: Cabaret; The Little Theatre of Alexandria: West Side Story and The History Boys; George Mason University: Middletown, Boleros for the Disenchanted, and Peter Pan: The Boy Who Hated Mothers. Ben is completing his BFA in Acting at George Mason University this fall. He has also completed a work study program at Studio Theatre’s acting conservatory. He would like to thank his parents, girlfriend, and friends for their endless support.

Zach Roberts (Changeling: Music Director) (he, him, his) is BST Resident Music Director. BST credits include: ’Tis Pity She’s a Whore, Antony and Cleopatra, A Midsummer Night’s Dream, The Two Noble Kinsmen, and The Maid’s Tragedy. Zach recently performed in The Lady with the Little Dog (Quotidian), War of the Worlds (SCENA), Friendship Betrayed (WSC Avant Bard), and Madwoman of Chaillot (WSC Avant Bard). He also directed Family Portrait for the DC Music Theatre Workshop.

Ian Blackwell Rogers (Changeling: Lollio; Duchess: Ferdinand) (he, him, his) is a BST Artistic Associate: Duke, Antonio, Launce (Two Gentlemen of Verona); Stanley, Tyrrel, Lord Mayor (Richard III); Theseus, Oberon (Two Noble Kinsmen/Midsummer Night’s Dream); King (The Maid’s Tragedy); Soranzo, Bessus (’Tis Pity She’s a Whore/A King and No King); Robin, Lucifer (Doctor Faustus); Menenius (Coriolanus). Rebecca Speas (Changeling: Tomazo / Diaphanta; Duchess: Bosola) (she, her, hers) is a North Carolina-born actor and director who is happy to return to BST after appearing in The Maid’s Tragedy. Previous roles include Emma Borden in Lizzie, Hazel in Over Her Dead Body (Pinky Swear Productions); Amiens in As You Like It (Prince George’s Shakespeare in the Parks); and a Medium in The Tarot Reading IV (The Arcanists). By day (and often by night) Rebecca is a fiercely independent bookseller and events coordinator at One More Page Books in Arlington, VA. Love to Quill and Eleanor, for everything.

Emily Sucher (Intimacy Choreographer) (she, her, hers) is a multidisciplinary theatre artist and Equity Membership Candidate. Her combined experience as a performer, educator, and physical examination instructor for local medical schools led Emily to her theatrical intimacy studies. A member of Intimacy Directors International, she attended the first international workshop and credits the IDI Pillars as the foundation of her work. She has intimacy choreographed and consulted for Pinky Swear Productions, 4615 Theatre, The Welders, Fells Point Corner Theatre, and Cohesion Theatre Company, and is excited to help pioneer the movement to empower artists and to create truthful and safe theatre. Emily is currently understudying the roles of Blanche of Spain and Arthur at the Folger Theatre.

Abby Wasserman (Changeling: Stage Manager) (she, her, hers) is a Freelance Stage Manager in the DC area who graduated from the University of Maryland College Park with a BA in Theatre. by William Shakespeare directed by Jessica Aimone

April 4 - 27, 2019

Be our guest in the spring of 2019 at the wedding of the year – a romantic and thoughtful romp through the forest of Arden with all new music. This production reunites the team behind our entertaining, touching, and bittersweet production of A Midsummer Night's Dream: director Jessica Aimone and music director Zach Roberts.

HISTORY IS 2020

Shakespeare’s eight plays about the Wars of the Roses drive home the cyclical nature of violence and history, while also bringing intimate, touching domestic stories of lovers, parents and children, and divided loyalties. When performed together as one epic story, the plays’ emotional resonance and impact is even stronger. In 2020, Brave Spirits Theatre will make history by becoming the first professional American theatre company to mount full productions of Shakespeare’s two tetralogies and perform them in repertory. Performing near the nation’s capital, Brave Spirits will bring a distinctly American stamp to these plays, while also staging them in their signature actor-driven, intimate, and dark style. Experts at textual delivery and known for their bold, ambitious programming choices, Brave Spirits’ staging of Shakespeare’s Histories is sure to be a not-to-be-missed event.

The ambitious Histories project will be the culmination of years of work, which is already underway, and depends on the support of people like you to be successful. You can help BST make history by donating monthly for the next two years at www.patreon.com/BraveSpiritsTheatre.
